The man who asks "Is it hot enough for you?" was abroad yesterday.

A Tucson man was given a year in Yuma for stealing an electric fan. The Tucson police must be a heartless lot.

The minister who married Corey to the actress is sorry he did it. We give Corey a few weeks more to follow suit.

Like Mark Twain's famous denial, Ex-Lieutenant Brooks of the rangers wishes to remark that the report of his death was greatly exaggerated.

A large majority of Globe taxpayers would welcome the opportunity to vote for a sewer bond issue, whenever the city council gets ready to put it up to them.

Schmitz does not want Judge Dunne to try him, alleging bias and prejudice. If Dunne is not prejudiced against Schmitz, he is the wrong kind of man to try anyone.

The defense in the Haywood trial has ceased asking prospective jurors questions regarding Roosevelt's letters and Taft's speeches. Neither seem to have cut much ice in Idaho.

As the national election draws near President Roosevelt pays more attention to his would-be successor. Like beauty, the president's high ideals are only skin-deep and under the epidermis shows the politician.

The El Paso Herald says that President Diaz is the "Herald of Peace," to which the morning paper will probably take exception. Still they could hardly call him the "white-winged dove."

The dean of Cornell university says the way to avoid suicide is to get married. Still some men who did marry would never have thought of self-destruction otherwise. It all depends on what sort of wife you draw in the marriage lottery.

SCHOOL BOARD ELECTION

An election has been called for May 29, a week from tomorrow, to vote upon an issue of $40,000 of bonds with which it is proposed to erect the new school buildings in Globe, each to be of four or five rooms, one for North Globe and the other for South Globe. Although no opposition to the issue is expected to manifest itself, we present certain facts regarding the condition of the Globe schools, from which one can see that it is imperative to increase the facilities which now are wholly inadequate.

With the greatly increased population of Globe, the number of children of school age has grown in proportion. At present there are twelve teachers who are occupying twelve rooms. The number of children who have actually attended school at some time during the year just closing and whose names are enrolled on the class registers is 818, which would make an average for each room and teacher of sixty-eight pupils. One of the primary teachers, however, enrolled 103 children and another 100 during the year.

A teacher is supposed to handle from thirty-five to forty pupils, and the limit where the teacher is supposed to be able to do good work would be forty-five children, yet the twelve teachers would average about sixty-eight children, and the capacity of the rooms would be estimated at say from forty to forty-five, yet they have been compelled to place seats in the aisles and back against the walls, and crowd in some instances from seventy to eighty children in a room. Of course, all of the children enrolled may have not been in school at the same time, yet they have been in and out during the year, at some time.

Seven additional teachers have been employed for the coming year and much more room is needed. The school trustees, J. S. Miles, S. F. Sullenberger and G. F. Cook are now considering several sites which have been submitted and purchases will be made as soon as the election is held.

THE OHIO SITUATION

The so-called primary conference of the Ohio Republican factions has been "indefinitely postponed." On its face the call seemed to assume that if the persons and the politicians most interested agreed to a division of the honors—giving to Taft the presidential delegates, assuring Foraker's re-election to the senate, and conceding the renomination of Governor Harris—everything would be settled.

But Secretary Taft refused to be tied up to any such agreement. Governor Harris perceived the impolicy of assuming to forestall the action of the state convention, and so there was nothing left for Senator Foraker except to dig up his tomahawk and resume the war path.

It was reported last week that the president did not like the proposed arrangement, and insisted that Foraker must be crushed. If true, this would be about the surest way to make the senator's calling and election sure. The Ohio Republicans, unless they have changed radically in the last few years, would not consent, at any outsider's behest, to punish their senator for his honest and manly independence. They will doubtless support Secretary Taft for the presidential nomination, because they like him and believe in him, and because they think that with their endorsement he can be nominated and elected, and that no other Ohio man can. But for a president not only to insist upon naming his successor, but to decree that a senator who has dared to oppose certain of his policies must be "crushed," would be a little too much. When Senator Foraker shall go to the length of openly antagonizing Secretary Taft as well as the president, he is likely to save his seat. And Republican courage in the senate is not so plentiful that the "fiery Foraker" can well be spared.

MORE CONFIDENCE IN COPPER METAL

George L. Walker Says that Big Interests Are Paying Good Prices for July Supply—No Possibility for Any Great Decline for Next Ten Years.

Confidence in the copper situation seems to have been restored. Lake copper is still held by producers at 25½ to 26 cents, and Electrolytic at 25¼ cents per pound. A great many consuming interests are making inquiries of copper. It is reported that some considerable sales of Lake have been made at 26 cents, and Electrolytic at 25¼ cents this week, but confirmation is so far lacking. There are some moderate lots of cash copper in the hands of small producers and they report that they are receiving no bids. This reflects the absolute stagnation that prevails. As soon as one or two of the large consumers make contracts, however, a great deal of business may be done.

There is now no prospect that the price of copper will be reduced. Should consumers decide not to purchase for any further advance delivery than July producers will still maintain prices. The market will not be offered down until there is an actual surplus of metal in existence, and there is no prospect that a real surplus will accumulate for several months to come.

While it is quite probable that the price of copper will settle down to a somewhat lower level toward the end of this year or the first of next, there is no possibility that copper will decline in a decade to the low prices of a few years ago.

Electrical development will be too rapid and too extended to permit a copper surplus to accumulate.

Twenty years ago an amount equal to 25 per cent to 40 per cent of the current annual copper production was always piled up in smelter yards and storehouses, in transit and in speculative hands. At present it is estimated that not more than 5 per cent of a year's output of refined, ready-to-use copper exists outside of consumers bins. In 1901, when copper declined to 10½ cents, there was a total surplus of over 400,000,000 pounds, or nearly half a year's world's output. Notwithstanding this surplus and the subsequent tremendous increase in production, all the available copper has been absorbed and the price has advanced to 26 cents. Of course, a direct reversal of these conditions is utterly impossible.—Walker's Copper letter.

Survivors of the "306"

When the next Republican national convention meets the famous "306" will be on hand and will furnish an interesting and novel feature of the affair. Three hundred and six delegates voted for General Grant for thirty-six ballots without losing a man at the Chicago convention of 1880. They were headed by Senator Roscoe Conklin of New York, Senator John A. Logan of Illinois and Senator Don Cameron of Pennsylvania.

The figures "306" were famous in politics for years after that in fact long as the great fight between the Stalwarts and the Halfbreeds continued. Senator Cameron had a medal struck to commemorate the fight, with "306" on it, and presented one to each of the 306.

Colonel A. W. Hughes of Tennessee was one of the 306, and he is engineering the scheme to have the survivors next year wherever the national convention is held. There are understood to be about eighty survivors.—Washington dispatch to the New York Times.

BISBEE MINERS KILLED AT WORK

Chris Miller Killed by Boulder in C. & A. Mine and M. J. Bryce Picked into Mined Hole While at Work for the Greene Gold-Silver in Chihuahua.

The Bisbee Review gives the following account of the deaths of two well known miners:

At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon one of the old-time miners of the Warren district was instantly killed while at work in a stope on the 900 level of the Irish Mag shaft of the Calumet & Arizona Mining company. The man was a Slavonian by birth, but has always used the name of Chris Miller since shortly after he came to this country years ago. Several of his friends state that his real name is Chris Millervich. When Miller and his partner went to work yesterday they took up the timbering of a stope where the other shift had left off, and worked steadily. About 2:30 the job brought them into the stope and Miller went ahead to test the ground and see if there was any danger of a cave. After several minutes he returned and stated that it seemed all right and both men went to work. They were just about to line up the timbers, and while his partner held them in place, Miller stooped over to get a tool. At that second a big boulder which had been in the roof tore loose, and falling, struck Miller between the shoulders, crushing him to the earth. He never uttered a sound.

M. J. Byrne, a miner formerly employed in Bisbee at the Holbrook shaft of the Copper Queen company, was accidentally killed while at work in the Sargossa mine of the Greene Gold-Silver company at Cocheno, in Chihuahua, on May 4.

Telegraphic advices announcing the death of Byrne were received here by the wife of the deceased last week, and on Tuesday a letter arrived from Superintendent Charles E. Egan giving the particulars of the accident.

On the morning of May 5, about 1 o'clock, Byrne, together with several other miners, was working on a stope between the five and six hundred levels of the Zaragoza mine. While in the act of drilling, double-handed, a missed hole exploded a foot below the hole being drilled, killing Bryce instantly and seriously injuring his partner.

According to the letter from Superintendent Egan, a rigid investigation followed to determine why the missed hole had not been reported, but it appears that the men who had loaded and fired the round of holes on the previous shift had no knowledge that the shot had missed, and thought that the entire round had exploded and that the face of the stope was safe.

On May 5, at 4 p. m., a special train left the mines for the town of Cocheno with the body, accompanied by about one hundred American miners, from which point the funeral procession was augmented by Americans from the mill, as Byrne was very popular among his associates. Byrne was buried near the grave of an American master mechanic of the mill, who met his death some years ago, and a temporary cross was installed pending the completion of a stone monument which will be erected as soon as the age of the deceased and birth place is received from the bereaved widow in this city.
